HOME CIRCLE COLUMN

A COLUMN DEDICATED TO TIRED MOTHERS AS THEY JOIN THE HOME CIRCLE AT EVENING TIDE.

A gentleman in London has asked a legal separation from his wife because she made unkind reference to his bald head. "I am proud of my bald head," said the flouted husband, "you can't have hair and brains as well."

We have noticed that successful money makers are usually short of hair. If a man has money why desire hair on his pate?

—Journal of Commerce.

The man who disclaims against sentiment and scorns romance is a man to be feared and avoided, a man who would rob the sunset of its glory, wash the green off the grass and foliage, and strip the gold from the fields of ripening grain, if there were profit in the process.

If we would preserve to human existence that which makes it worth while, than the presence of the clouds beneath our feet, we must set our faces resolutely against that materialism that discovers merit only in gain and that would banish all high ideals from our lives on the ground that they do not pay.

Lady Astor's visit to this country has been worth while in many ways. But more important of all, she has brought a case before our very eyes proving that a woman can serve in public life, not as a business woman but as a politician and still retain the charm of her womanhood.

The advocates of woman's rights have had a hard time to overcome the old prejudices. Men are accustomed to expect in a model woman nothing but a happy mixture of a skilled scrub woman, a chief cook and bottle washer and a remarkable sock-darner. They scoffed at the possibility of women entering the business world. However, people scoffed at Fulton steam boat, and today we have the majestic large enough to carry a fair sized city.

Although there are certain physical limitations to their work, on the other hand they have proved more dexterous, more skillful, more patient and more painstaking than men. Consequently both sexes working together is an ideal arrangement as one offsets the faults of the other. The beginning of a woman's work is nearly always routine work which is bound to be monotonous and tiresome, but if they possess ability and stick-to-it-iveness, they are sure to win success.

Someone has very aptly remarked that, "every thing which a woman can do a rich woman pays other women to do for her. That is probably the reason why rich women as a class are less happy than poor ones. They have plenty of time on their hands in which to ponder their real ills and make up a lot of fancied ones."

Something to do—that is the secret of happiness. It should not be hard to find yet nothing is more vainly sought than happiness. That is because many people believe its secret lies in nothing to do.

You often hear a man declare that there is no use in trying to get anywhere without a "pull." However that is an excuse rather than a fact. It is true that men do get to rather good positions through a "pull" as it is called—but how miserable they are. They must constantly be on the watch for a dangerous rival for the affections of their benefactor. Because their position was not tangible upon which to base their hopes for the future. If the man who helped them should suddenly leave the company or lose favor with the powers that be they are very much out of luck because their lack of ability is bound to be found out.

Indeed the man who holds his position through the favor of another has not an enviable position. His life is not a bed of roses. Don't envy him, but hustle around and scratch for yourself.

MYRTLE CHAPEL.

There will be a children's day service Sunday morning, June 18, at Myrtle chapel. Everybody invited. COMMITTEE.

Tired

"I was weak and run-down," relates Mrs. Eula Burnett, of Dalton, Ga. "I was thin and just felt tired, all the time. I didn't rest well. I wasn't ever hungry. I knew, by this, I needed a tonic, and as there is none better than—

CARDUI The Woman's Tonic

"... I began using Cardui," continues Mrs. Burnett. "After my first bottle, I slept better and ate better. I took four bottles. Now I'm well, feel just fine, eat and sleep, my skin is clear and I have gained and sure feel that Cardui is the best tonic ever made."

Thousands of other women have found Cardui just as Mrs. Burnett did. It should help you.

At all druggists.
